Maybe they are the same kind of "lions" as portrayed by John Bunyan in his "Pilgrim's Progress."

Germans plan for Petrograd attack from two points.

That must have been a real "Made-in Germany" peace that the Slavs got—a peace whereby the Germans could continue the war, and the Slavs leave the trenches and return home.

"Point of crisis passed in ship shortage now," says American war officials.

Now, if the "point" of the compass will do its part in keeping the transports out of the way of the subs—the "point" will be gained by the Allies.

"Tommy, Make Room for Your Uncle!"

OR, CHINOOK—A LOGICAL CENTRE FOR A DIVISIONAL POINT

There seems to be quite a flutter of excitement over the rumor that the C.N.R. was likely to move its divisional point from Hanna to Munson, on account of the former's water wagon not being large enough to supply the increased needs of the railway—that doesn't necessarily mean the company's "watered-stock."

Drumheller, with some show of reason, also makes the claim to be the choice of the railway officials; while, we understand, Youngstown has an eye on the prize.

The Hanna Herald, in discussing the relative merits of the substituted places mentioned, says that Munson could give no better water supply than Hanna, that Drumheller cannot be even thought of, and concludes that Hanna is the most logical place all around—if she can deliver the goods.

But up to the present the goods doesn't seemed to have been delivered—hence, the company is looking around for a place where it can get the goods delivered in sufficient quantity for its increasing needs.

Now, Tommy, this is where your uncle comes in.

While laying no claim for Hanna's divisional point, for it is pretty certain that the company will maintain one between Hanna and Drumheller, we claim that Chinook is the most logical point for a divisional centre east of Hanna.

Perhaps it may not be generally known that for some time high railway officials have had an eye upon Chinook for "something good," we have been assured more than once. Last year, the company had a large gang of men here boring for water and building a reservoir, and, we understand, are coming back to it again this year. Chinook has the water in abundance, and can be had by going after it.

And then again, it is at Chinook where the thrice-surveyed C.P.R. Edmonton to Medicine Hat proposed branch line crosses the C.N.R., and it is rumored that they will build a station—maybe a union station—for the C.N.R. now being government-owned, the hatchet has been buried between these two rival roads, and in future the lion and the lamb will lie down together, and one of the fruits of such an understanding, will, in all probability, will be a large union station and a divisional point for both companies at Chinook.

But what is the matter with Hanna? If the division is worth keeping, would it not be worth enough to Hanna for that town to help to get the water to the company instead of the company getting the water for Hanna—that is, if Hanna can deliver the goods?

The company's got to have the water, that's a cinch.

Chinook's Water System

While we are on the water wagon, we would like to have a word about our own local supply.

It is becoming more and more apparent that some different system of a water supply in Chinook will have to be made, if for domestic purposes only, let alone for fire protection. The open pump system is very unsatisfactory at the best, but more particularly during the winter months. The pumps are continually out of order—either broken or frozen up, and the citizens, at such times, are hard put to for water for domestic purposes. But that is not the most serious side of the question. Everyone feels that should a bad fire one get a proper start in a congested part the best part of the village would be wiped out, the village being only able to throw on the burning mass a few barrels from the chemical fire engine.

It's a pretty serious state of affairs, when one takes time to think about it.

We believe the present village council are disposed to take some definite action on this question in the spring, and if they do, it is hoped every citizen will give them all the encouragement possible. Don't be a knocker, but a booster. We had even better pay a little more in taxes to get good water system, adequate and always available for domestic use and for fire protection, than take the daily risk of seeing our village wiped out by fire.

Prevention is better than a cure—every time.

What Is Thrift?

The prudent man looks ahead and gets ready. The frugal man lives carefully and saves persistently. The economical man spends judiciously, buys wisely, and wastes nothing. The industrious man works hard. The miser hoards. But the man of thrift spends wisely, plans carefully, manages economically, and saves consistently. Thrift should be all of prudence, economy, frugality, industry—and more. Thrift is conservation. Thrift is discrimination. Thrift is self-discipline, self-control, self-respect. Thrift is a foundation stone of character—individual and national. Thrift is practical patriotism.

The kaiser wants peace—and the earth wants it. He may get it, but not just now.

We suspect that if the kaiser became the real leader of his soldiers he wouldn't last long. But he is careful to keep outside the shooting distance of the enemy.

Any special reason why the common people should have to show all the patriotism? Why cannot the wealthy show a bit of consideration instead of grabbing everything in sight by way of profits, which have to come out of the working man? It's a fair question.

It's all right for the government to allow big war profits on contracts provide they tax those war profits about ninety-nine and two-thirds per cent.

"There was Daly. They were friends, in a way, and I wouldn't trust the fellow. Still, I don't know how far his influence went, and I imagine Fred hadn't much to do with him for some months. Besides, Daly wasn't at the crossing when—"

Hulton said nothing for the next few moments and Foster mused. Fred Hulton had been very likeable, in spite of certain weaknesses, and he thought it cost him rather something to talk about him as he did. Hulton, however, seldom showed what he felt and would, no doubt, take the line he thought best with a store disregard of the pain it might cause. He rested his elbow on the table, as if he were tired, and sat very quiet with his chin on his hand, until he asked Featherstone:

"Why did you lend Fred the money he sent the girl?"

"For one thing, because he was my friend," Featherstone answered with a flush. "Then I knew into what straits the need of money can drive a young man. I got into trouble myself some years ago."

Hulton nodded. "Thank you. You helped him out. You have no ground to think he was ungrateful now, do you?"

"I feel sure he was not. He kept some time talking cheerfully about a hunting trip he meant to make."

"Well," said Hulton quietly, "you're going to be surprised now. I did not give my evidence as frankly as you claim to have done, but kept something back. Mr. Percival was away for two or three weeks, and Fred was the only person beside myself who knew the combination that opens the big safe. In the morning after we found him dead I examined the safe. A number of bonds and a wad of small bills were missing. It was significant that Percival was due back next day."

Featherstone started, but his face was hot with scornful anger.

"That had no significance! I'd as soon suspect myself or my partner of stealing bonds, and I wanted an open throw a new light upon the thing. Somebody you haven't thought of yet knew or found out the combination."

"Then, in face of what you have heard, you do not believe my son fired the shot that took his life?"

"No, sir," said Featherstone, with quiet earnestness. "I never thought it, and it is impossible to believe it now."

"My partner's opinion's mine," Foster broke in.

Hulton looked from one to the other and a curious steeled glitter came into his eyes. It hinted at a pitiless, unchangeable purpose, and bracing himself with an effort he clenched his fist.

"Nor do I believe it! If necessary I'll let my business and factory go and spend the last dollar I've got to find the man who killed my boy."

The Kaiser, a few years ago, renounced drink himself and said that the next war would be won by the nation that drank the least alcohol.

Kitchener and Lord Roberts knew the same thing and in Egypt and South Africa they decreed prohibition for their armies, and won.

The czar of Russia realized that the great factor contributing to Russia's defeat in the Russo-Japanese war was drunkenness among his soldiers, and early in the present war decreed prohibition in his empire.

"No vital relation!" "Vital" means life. Success in the conflict depends on the life of men. The cleaner the blood, the longer the life, and the purer the blood the greater the hope of recovery from wounds.

Life begins at home where the babe is born, whence the soldiers must come, and where economy of life's forces must begin. If life is not conserved there, war will be a dismal failure.

King George realized this and banished liquor from his household when the war began. Kitchener followed the lead of his king. A host of people in Great Britain are clamoring for prohibition and insisting that Germany cannot be beaten until whiskey and beer-making are stopped.

If prohibition is good for the soldier and sailor, it is good for the places and people whence they come. Conservation of food (by prohibiting its manufacture into alcohol) to make men who are to make war is in the highest interests of economy.—J. H. Hazelwood, Department of Social Service.

Daylight Saving Economies

Daylight saving seems likely to receive more attention next summer than ever before. One strong reason for the April to September general adoption of the plan is that it will save in electric light and gas plants alone more than a million tons of coal. It is by no means improbable that the Canadian and American governments will both decree summer daylight saving as a measure of national economy as have Great Britain, France, Germany and other European nations.—St. John Globe.

happ it's lucky the wage clerk went into the treasurer's office after I left, though I spoke to the watchman, Jordan, as I went out."

"No," said Percival sharply. "It wasn't Jordan's work on night guard. There was silence for a moment, and then Hulton asked: 'Where did you meet the man you thought was Jordan? Did he answer you?'"

"He was going along the ground floor passage in front of me, and the only light was in the pay office at the end. He stood in the doorway as I passed and I said, 'It's a cold night, Tom.' I'd gone a few yards, when he answered, 'It will be colder soon.'"

"Then as you passed the door he must have seen your face, though you could not see his," said Hulton, who turned to Percival. "Clark was on night guard and his name's not Tom. Where was he when Mr. Featherstone left?"

"In the lath room at the other end of the building. The punch in the check clock shows it," Percival replied.

"Hulton pondered, knitting his brows, before he said, 'Since you thought the man was Jordan, you must not have seen him. A stranger was in the factory.' Then he got up with a look of keen relief in his eyes, and he said to you, 'Partner, you have given me hope. Some day all who know my boy will believe what you believe. Now, I have something to say to Percival, and then he must help me home to bed.'"

"I imagine the fellow who shot Fred Hulton will need your help," Featherstone replied. "The old man will run him down with the detector and the energy that he'd used him to build up his business. Money with brains behind it is a power, but I wouldn't like Hulton on my track if he hadn't a cent. There's something relentless about the man."

Prohibition and the War

Arguments to Prove That Prohibition Is a Vital Necessity

During War Time

"Prohibition has no vital relation to war," said the New York World, in a recent issue. This was written to support the claim that prohibitions were simply striving to block the food bill with a clause that was not necessary and they were "not concerned with the defeat of Germany."

Well! let us see. On what must war depend? On men, and only by means of men can victory be gained. To fight and win they must be fit. The Kaiser, a few years ago, renounced drink himself and said that the next war would be won by the nation that drank the least alcohol.

Kitchener and Lord Roberts knew the same thing and in Egypt and South Africa they decreed prohibition for their armies, and won.

The czar of Russia realized that the great factor contributing to Russia's defeat in the Russo-Japanese war was drunkenness among his soldiers, and early in the present war decreed prohibition in his empire.

WHEAT

Canada is pre-eminently a land of wheat. Her fields of waving grain have become symbolic in all parts of the world. She is a wheat exporting country.

Between now and next harvest it will be necessary to deliver on the other side of the Atlantic from 450,000,000 to 500,000,000 bushels of wheat. Millions of men have been taken from wheat raising and sent into the trenches. Fields have been laid waste by the enemy. Ships bearing precious freights of food stuffs have been sunk by submarines. Crops in other countries have fallen short. Europe is threatened gravely threatened, by famine.

The responsibility, therefore, rests upon the North American continent to make good the deficiency of Europe. The United States has not a bushel of wheat to spare over and above her normal consumption. Canada has only from 100,000,000 to 110,000,000 bushels of exportable wheat.

The people of the United States and Canada are asked to liberate one-fifth of their normal supply of wheat or flour to make up part of Europe's deficiency.

This means that consumption must be decreased; that less white bread must be eaten; that substitutes must be adopted. In the simplest analysis it means that three slices of white bread should take the place of four in everyone's diet.

Wheat is undoubtedly the best bread cereal, but other flour can readily be mixed with wheat flour to make bread. People in Canada can scarcely realize what the shortage of wheat means to Europe. The people of France are almost absolutely dependent upon wheat bread. Bread constitutes 52 per cent of their total food supply. In no better way can Canadian women help their patriotic sisters in Europe than by being sparing in their use of white flour.

He seated himself in the grill and made a protracted study of the menu. "Waiter," he said at length, "I have only two dollars with me. What would you recommend?" The waiter gently removed the card from the hand of the unsophisticated stranger, as he replied "Another restaurant."—The Argonaut.

Jupiter of Enormous Size

Great Planet Is Larger Than All the Others Combined

Jupiter is far the largest of the planets. (Diameter 84,000 miles). It is larger, indeed, than all the others combined. How appropriate that this mighty sphere should have such a name! But is it not strange that Venus, which looks so much brighter than Jupiter, was not in pre-historic days called Jupiter? Probably Venus was named first because of its greater brilliancy and in virtue of its conspicuous beauty received the name of the charming goddess, after which the only name worthy of the great planet we are now considering was that of the father of the gods.

Jupiter resembles the sun and Saturn in the fact that it is not solid at its surface. Its equatorial regions, like theirs, float somewhat freely over the deeper layers of its body.

Seasons are absent from Jupiter's year, which is equal to about twelve of ours. The Jovian day is less than ten hours or about twenty minutes less than the day of Saturn. Bodies weigh about two and a half times as much as on the earth and 20 per cent more at the poles than at the equator.

Jupiter and the poles of Saturn are the only places in the solar system, away from the sun itself where bodies weigh heavier than on earth.

There are 104.5 days in the Jovian year. A point at the earth's equator moves a little more than 1,000 miles per hour, a similar point on Jupiter's equator moves about 26,000 miles per hour.

Jupiter has nine moons. The four largest were discovered by Galileo, being among the very first objects revealed by the aid of the telescope. The latest Jovian moon was discovered in 1914 by means of the photograph, the object being too distant and too small to be seen with the largest telescope.

To Buy Out the Publican

Britain Still Muddling Along on the Drink Question

The commission, presided over by Lord Sumner, which was appointed to consider what should be the terms if state purchase of the liquor trade were adopted in England and Wales, have reported. The commission were expressly precluded by their terms of reference from reporting on policy, and therefore do not make any recommendation for or against state purchase.

Their business was to consider how control of the trade could be maintained after the war, and the terms of purchase if the government decided on it.

It is understood that they find that not less than £350,000,000 would be required to purchase the brewery and public house interest in England and Wales. This is presumed to include the supply of malt got by the breweries from the maltsters. It does not include spirits, but although there are very few distilleries in England there is something like 150,000,000 gallons of whisky in this country to deal with which would be a complicated matter.

It is of interest to note that the extremists on the side of the liquor trade have in the past talked the purchase price up to a figure between 500 and 600 millions.—London, England, Daily News.
